VIII. CERTIFICATION, ELIGIBILITY & COORDINATION OF SERVICES

At least 10 days advance written notice shall be given the individual specifying the time and place of the hearing.

The hearing is conducted informally according to the rules of civil procedures. It begins with a formal statement by the hearing officer which identifies the hearing. The hearing officer then requests those persons representing each party to identify themselves for the record by stating their name, who they represent and their address. Only one person represents each party, but each may call witnesses.

The program representative then presents his opening statement. This statement usually consists of a short commentary or summary of the decision and action of the program against which the applicant has filed an appeal, the reason for the decision or action, and the overall approach the program will take to substantiate the appropriateness of the decision or action. Also included should be citations of the law, rule or policy used as the basis for the decision to take the negative action.

It is particularly important to include in the opening statement that the issue is the decision and the basis for that decision, not actions that occurred subsequent to the time of the decision. This helps to avoid claims that the current circumstances are better than they were when the decision was made. Anything that occurred subsequent to that date cannot be adequately assessed, and should not be a part of the hearing.

The applicant, or his representative, is then asked to make a short opening statement giving the applicant's position regarding the action which is being taken, the reason for this position, and the general approach he/she will take to substantiate the appropriateness of this position. The applicant may choose not to make a statement at this time, but to defer such a statement to the beginning of the presentation of his/her case.

The representative of the program is then called upon to provide evidence in support of the decision to take the negative action. At this time, exhibits, including medical documents, may be placed in evidence. The party not introducing the exhibit is given an opportunity to review it and to ask questions. Such questions should pertain only to the document itself. The hearing officer then determines whether the document is received in evidence or rejected and why.

Reports to be used as evidence must have been made available to the applicant prior to the hearing. Witnesses may be called by the program to give verbal testimony. Before giving testimony, the witness should state his or her name, and interest in this proceeding, for the record. The applicant, or his representative, may cross-examine any witness at the conclusion of their testimony. Questioning from the representatives of both sides made continue to the point of reason. Any witness may be recalled at a later time by either party when reasonable grounds to do so are present.

The hearing officer may ask questions of any witness to assist in understanding the case. This is usually done at the conclusion of all questioning of a specific witness. If the applicant represents himself, some assistance may be given by the hearing officer. However, the hearing officer does not present or argue either side of the case. An attempt is usually made to limit all arguments and evidence to relevant points. If the hearing is especially long, periodic recesses may be granted or offered.

Upon completion of the presentation of the program's case, the applicant, or his/her representative is asked to present their case following the same procedures and limitations as the programs. In addition, the applicant, or his representative may wish to present rebuttal evidence and testimony relating to the program's presentation. The program's representative is then also given an opportunity to present rebuttal evidence. Such evidence is restricted to those points made by the applicant or his representative during his presentation.

Upon the completion of all rebuttals, the representative of the program presents a brief closing statement summarizing the basis for the program's decision to take negative action and the evidence gathered to support that decision.

The applicant or his representative then follows with his/her closing statement summarizing the applicant's position in opposition to the decision to take negative action and the evidence to support that decision.

Finally, the hearing officer terminates the hearing with a statement which concludes the hearing and notifies both parties that each will be mailed a copy of his decision within the specified time frame.

A decision, either supportive of the negative action or a reversal of it, will be issued in writing within 45 days of the request of the hearing. If the decision of the hearing officer upholds the decision to take negative action, the action becomes effective.

If the applicant does not appear, without good cause, for the hearing, the hearing will be considered abandoned and the decision of the program becomes effective.

The State may deny a hearing to an applicant who has been previously determined ineligible in hearing and cannot provide additional evidence. Refer to WIC manual Fair Hearing Process policies.
