

Depression, 2016

Respondents who were told by a doctor, nurse, or health professional that they had some form of depression.

The national median for having depression is 17.4 percent. South Dakota has 15.7 percent of respondents who have depression.

New York has the lowest with 11.7 percent, while Oregon has the highest with 25.0 percent of respondents who have depression.

Nationally, Respondents Who Were Told They Have Depression, 2016

Source: The Behavioral Risk Factor Surveillance System, South Dakota Department of Health, 2016